Welcome to the Oncomax Cancer Centre

What to bring to your first consultation:

Arranging for a friend or family member to come with you.

You will receive a lot of information during the appointment and it'll be helpful to have someone else with you to listen and take notes.

Bringing paper and a pen and a list of questions you might have

So you can take notes during your appointment.

Bring your medical aid details and your ID card or driver's license

We will need to know your medical aid name as well as who is the main member, which option you are on, and the membership number.

Bring your histology report

This report analyses the tissue samples from the tumour that were taken at your biopsy or surgical procedures.

Bring your radiology tests

These are tests that have been taken at a radiology or nuclear medicine department. The images may be on disc or on film. Examples include x-rays, CT scans, MRIs, PET scans and bone scans.

Bring your medical summary

This is a description detailing general medical history, any operations you have had and list of allergies.

Bring a list of your medication

Please be sure to bring a list of all medications that you take, including those prescribed by doctors and those that you buy over the counter (vitamins or herbal products).
